The Commencement Record

An Account of the Achievements of the Class of January 1928

The Girard College Press

*L*ET us remember those who have helped us, those who have guided, taught, and prayed for us. Let us show them appreciation by making our lives worthy.

Editorial

Old names come back to one—names of those who have long ago departed, those who were slothful and lazy, those who were dissatisfied and unappreciative. They are shadowy unreal personalities now, whose whereabouts and fortunes are unknown and hardly thought of. They serve but as a contrasting background for the foresight and perseverance of those who carried on. That is the main point to bear in mind, to remember that some carried on—not that some fell by the wayside. Perhaps it was from a sense of duty, perhaps from a faint uncertainty as to the ultimate desirability of dropping out of the race; but whatever the reason, as time went on, the wisdom of perseverance became apparent.

Slow development under careful restraint and encouragement, together with a systematic training of mind and body, brings lasting and worthwhile results. It is known and proved that the result of any labor or energy depends directly upon the material dealt with and its treatment. All worth-while creations require a good beginning; and if this beginning is satisfactory to the conditions influencing its development, it will largely determine the general nature of the final product. Science teaches us that pure iron, when combined with other elements, still contains its basic characteristics; and, though its very form and appearance may change, the fundamentals still identify the compounds as containing iron. The base, the origin, the beginning, then, is the determining factor. When great effort is spent in strengthening and refining this essential, the worth of the result is assured.

Metal which in this way has been fused and tempered and forged is stronger than crude cast pigs. It is fine metal which is employed where flawless support and resistance are demanded. The strength of a great skyscraper depends upon its foundation; catastrophe will result unless this foundation can endure the weight and strain. If, then, the construction of the foundation is laid carefully and painstakingly, the whole building profits thereby. On the other hand, if the construction is poor and incomplete, it results in weak foundations—the entire structure is endangered.

This same is true in our lives. Here our lives are the edifices which we must build; the years of our youth are the foundation. The discipline, the work and study, the petty privations, these are the fires by which our iron is tempered. Our futures depend upon how we are trained, how we adapt ourselves to preparation here. If we have not completed our education, if we have loafed and cheated, if we have not used our opportunities, then have our foundations been neglected—not by others, but by ourselves. But, if on the other hand, we have borne up and profited by the discipline, the work and study, the petty privations, then we have forged for ourselves secure foundations.

The best Girard could offer us has been opportunity, instruction, plans and formulae, materials, advice, influence, discipline. Now as we ourselves assume the responsibility of our futures, it remains for us to build worthy structures upon these foundations.

The Last Word

The Class of January 1928 reached its seniority at a time when Girard College was undergoing the greatest change in her history. Vast improvements were being introduced; a new system was being inaugurated which split up the formerly existing divisions into new and far differently organized groups. It was a system which demanded leadership from the senior class and cooperation from all.

The Class of January 1928 was impressed with its responsibilities, responsibilities which had confronted no former senior class. The task was a huge one, and the Class plunged into its duties with a spirit and a desire to succeed. To mention the successes and trials of the Class is undesirable and unnecessary in this place. Suffice it to say that the Class did its utmost to launch the new system as successfully and as happily as possible.

C. M. T. C. Representatives

Among the attainments of the individual members of the Class was our representation at the Citizens' Military Training Camps during the summer of 1927. Due to military training at the College, practically all of the group were corporals, the only exceptions being Joseph Lennox, who was the first "red" candidate ever to become a Sergeant; and Robert Kugler, who, because he joined the cavalry, was a private. The representatives of the Class certainly proved themselves marksmen. Joseph Di Renza and Robert Kugler both won medals for sharpshooting, while Jonathan Kistler and Joseph Lennox captured marksmanship bars, that of the latter being with the automatic rifle. Lester Adams' training with the College swimming team proved to be quite valuable, for it brought him a life-saving certificate and emblem. LaVerne Harding received a medal for being the best "red" candidate in his company. In addition to taking a sharpshooter's medal, Joseph DiRenza made a spectacular attempt to win the boxing championship of Fort Howard. He was finally stopped by the champion boxer of Berks County, Pennsylvania, after a gruelling match. A gold medal for first place in the javelin throw was awarded Vernon Hesser, while Jonathan Kistler took third place in the tennis finals at the same camp. It is quite apparent therefore that the members of the Class at the several camps surely made an enviable record individually and as a group, every one of them winning some distinction.

Miscellaneous Honors

Two other members also brought miscellaneous honors to the School and Class in outside competition when they captured prizes in the annual Philadelphia Boy Week events against hundreds of boys from all parts of the city. Dayton Froelich won a special prize of an album for his stamp collection in 1926, and in 1927 he was awarded a gold penknife for second prize in the exhibition of water colors. Arthur Nackman won second prize and a silver loving cup for his exhibition of stamps in 1926, and in 1927 a silver medal for capturing second place in the chin-ning contest.

When Robert Burleigh went home to Chinchilla last summer, he entered a tennis contest in Scranton. The result was that he and his partner each won a silver loving cup as the Junior Doubles Championship Team of Scranton.

Declamation and Play

As well as capturing laurels outside the College, the Class also distinguished itself within the ivy-covered walls. A matter of unusual occurrence was that in the Declamation Contest the entries of the graduating class carried off all the prizes, and every entry received a prize save one who received "honorable mention." Such a sweeping victory is truly praiseworthy.

Due to the fact that at the time of the annual Senior Play ours was the lower senior class, relatively few of the cast of "Romeo and Juliet" were of January 1928. A very creditable showing, however, was made by those few. Lester Adams took the part of Samson excellently; Frank Balas portrayed Juliet's old nurse to a hilarious degree; Louis Heavner played the role of Peter very cleverly; Frank Smith made a fine Gregory.

Student Publications

The literarily-inclined of the class were unable to find a great enough outlet for their tendencies in the "Magazine"; consequently, they founded "The Girard News," the paper which has so ably filled the former need in Girard for a record and publication of items of timely interest to the School. The five of them, Arthur Nackman, Charles Pealer, John Schuck, Jonathan Kistler, and Alfred Lisi, can well be proud of the results of their efforts.

The idea of "The Commencement Record" did not originate with any member of our Class. To all concerned with the "Record," the Class of January 1928 wishes to make known its appreciation for the suggestion that has resulted in breaking the long established precedent of including the history of the graduating class in "The Girard Magazine."

Regret

The portals of Girard swing open. The Class of January 1928 must depart. We leave with much regret, for our stay has been a very pleasant one, and our love and respect for Girard College has increased as the years rolled by. We believe that we have made a worthy record as a class, and we hope that we have furthered the morale of the institution. When we realize what Girard has done for us, it is our earnest desire that our great School may have, somehow, in some way, benefited by our having been here.

Oyez!

*Out of the darkness comes a tapping—
The tapping of a staff on cobblestones.
Out of the darkness comes a quivering flash—
The flash of light from a brass-bound lanthorn.
A faint bustle on the street beneath—
The trying of doors—the slamming of gates.
And the lanthorn shadows ghostly figures on the ceiling,
But the staff is prone to drive away the fears.*

Then from without:

*"Three by the glass, Mynherrs—
A fair morning, and all's well."*

*Again we hear the distant tapping of the staff
Like a lonesome dropping, dropping from the eaves.*

*So, guided by the light of wise instruction
And supported by the staff of youthful courage,
The Class of January, Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-eight*

*Wends its way
Into a new morning.*

Jonathan H. Kistler, Jan. '28
